Traditional –this tune as listed as a Traditional Strathspey in the first editions. I gleaned it from the MacNeil MS. Scottish pipers have named this tune and setting for the late Alex Currie although I never heard him play it. Rather than leave the title as Traditional I decided to name in honour of the man who thought enough about local tunes to write them in staff noitation and preserve them for future generations- Angus J. MacNeil.

Gille Crùbach – exists in several different settings among the older pipers and fiddlers in Cape Breton. It is also known as Caluim Crùbach and Miss Drummond of Perth.

Roy's Wife – settings of this tune are also published in several 19th century collections of bagpipe and violin music. It is also known as Am Caimbeulach Dubh (The Black Campbell).
